THE COMING BOND ISSUE

A Subscriber Expresses His Views Why Both Issues Should Carry

WATER SUPPLY NECESSARY

The Village water tower and tank are badly out of repair and standing in a condition which is dangerous to the safety of persons and property. You need only to take a glance at the tower to note that it is settled to one side and is settling at a dangerous incline. Were it to fall it might injure persons or property and also wreck such tower and tank. It is therefore in grave need of repair.

An adequate water supply to the village necessitates the sinking of a new well. With a good well and storage tank restored the village will be provided with water supply for domestic and fire purposes necessary to the well being of the residents.

An ordinance has been passed and approved providing for a bond issue to raise money for that purpose. It is planned to pay for such improvements and repairs out of the receipts for water and it is confidently expected that the water fund will repay for such outlays. In order, however to secure money now it is necessary to issue bonds and in order to make such bonds saleable it is necessary to provide for their payment. The ordinance is designed, therefore, to accomplish this purpose by providing for the redemption of such bonds from the water earnings as well as from taxation and for the surrender of such bonds as rapidly as moneys are earned from water service. Antioch needs this bond issue for the well being of its people and as protection against loss by fire to its property.

At the same time there will be submitted to the people an increase in tax levy to two per cent. The village treasury has lost in dram shop license about $3000.00 per year. The village will adjust itself to this situation but at the present time it has certain obligations which must be met which makes it necessary to secure more funds. It seems, therefore, the part of wisdom to confirm such ordinance.

The residents of this village have very commendably in voluntary manner subscribed money to various village and public needs. Such residents individually and collectively merit praise. The finances of the village, however, should not depend on voluntary subscription or favor of charity. Such finances should be assessed and levied against persons and property uniformly and impartially. Each person should bear his proportion of the load, no more, no less. The ordinance will spread the burden uniformly and impartially and put the village in position to meet its obligations honorably. Inquire into the condition of the Village Treasury and the needs thereof. Advise yourself thoroughly and then perform your civic duty as you see it.—Contributed by a subscriber.

Jay Graham Out of Luck

Jay Graham, professional trapshooter of Ingleside, Saturday was badly off form at the South Shore country club shoot and broke only 173 out of 200 targets. Frank Trish won the highest straight run. He broke 110 straight targets. In the open trophy Graham was second at 18 yards, third at 20, fourth at 22 and second at 25.

Tempera and Tight Collars.

Dr. Leonard Williams, lecturing on "Common Sense," at a nursing conference and exhibition in London, said that people with tight collars did not drain their brains properly, and often suffered from bad tempera. He had noticed that since women had given up high collars and were wearing garments which gave complete freedom to the neck they had become sweeter tempered.

Animals in Captivity.

Captivity causes many wild animals to live shorter lives than they would if left in their natural habitat. This is peculiarly true of foxes and monkeys. Gorillas and apes die so soon after being captured that they are rarely seen in zoological gardens. Turkeys, elephants and snakes seem to suffer not at all from captivity.

Lake County Fair Bigger Than Ever

Lake County's 66th annual fair will open September 3rd for four days of instruction and pleasure.

The Fair association has been completely reorganized, the buildings repaired, the premium list revised and the premiums increased.

All special premiums this year are of a practical nature. Valuable cups are being offered the live stock breeders and such things as flour, a pressure canner, aluminum ware etc. will be given in the woman's department.

There will be a stock judging contest on Thursday and Friday at 10:00 a. m. for boys and girls. Valuable pure bred livestock and free trips to the International Livestock show and the National Dairy show have been offered as premiums.

Lake Co. Cattle Exhibit at State Fair

More than sixty head of cattle from Lake county will be represented at the State Fair at Springfield, Aug. 15 to 23. The cattle will be headed under Lake County Exhibit. No Holsteins will be shown as the local dealers could not make arrangements early enough.

The cattle will be shown by the following men: W. A. Brown of Libertyville, 20 head of Jerseys; O. W. Lehman of Lake Villa, about 25 head of Guernsey cattle; J. K. Dering of Lake Villa about 25 head of Jersey cattle.

Will Investigate

Lazzaroni Death

An inquest was held in the criminal court building in Chicago on Wednesday, for the purpose of inquiring into the death of C. Lazzaroni, who was stabbed to death in the race riot.

It is said that four negroes thought to have been connected with the murder of Lazzaroni are now in custody.

This case will be watched with considerable interest by the people of Antioch and vicinity on account of a daughter of the murdered man being a resident of this village.

In Front of Store

One day the latter part of the week a strange gentleman accompanied by a small child drove up in front of Hillbrand's store in a Ford car, apparently being in a hurry he jumped out and entered the store leaving the child in the car and the engine running. After a time the noise of the engine attracted the attention of several people who notified the marshal. After waiting sometime for the man to appear the marshal went after him only to find that the fellow had entered the store by the front door and left it by way of the back door, evidently going direct to the depot and catching a train for the city.

About the time this was figured out a frantic mother came in search of the child. It then developed that the fellow had been staying at Channel and had picked the child up at some of the resorts and then abandoned it and the car together.

The car was taken to the Sales and Service Station where it was later claimed by a Mr. Wagner of Chicago who in company with the States Attorney came out and identified it.

H. B. EGER TO HOLD MEETING

Will Explain Reason Why Supervisors Voted for Road Bond Issue

$700,000 PROPOSED ISSUE

H. B. Eger, Libertyville township supervisor, has determined to call a public meeting in the town hall at Libertyville on Tuesday night, Aug. 19 where he will explain the attitude of the board of supervisors in relation to the proposed $700,000 road bond issue. It is proposed to submit for approval to Lake County voters.

There is growing opposition in the country districts, at least, to floating a three quarter million bond issue at this time, and those who seem to favor the proposition apparently do so only because they deem it likely that the Lake Shore towns will out vote the county towns and in retaliation the board of supervisors will not spend any of the amount voted in those districts where there is organized opposition to issuing the bonds.

Prevailing sentiment in the country districts is not opposed to road improvement, and on a large scale under normal conditions, but rather to all operations not positively necessary during the existing period of exorbitant prices for material and supplies and scarcity of labor.

At the Libertyville meeting free expression of opinion will be encouraged after the matter is presented and fully explained, and if the meeting is well attended the sense of that meeting will largely influence Supervisor Eger's action on the County board.

It is practically promised that the east and west road from Lake Bluff to Wauconda will be improved under this issue, and it is inferred by citizens of the territory traversed by that road oppose the issue and it carries over that opposition, then other roads will be improved first.

It is proposed to discuss the matter in all its phases at the mass meeting Tuesday night, Aug. 19. If you are interested and you surely ought to be attend this meeting. Citizens from adjoining townships are invited.

Shannon Appointed as Deputy Revenue Collector

John Shannon of Fox Lake, veteran in the internal revenue service, has been appointed to succeed E. J. Horan, deputy revenue collector, who was found dead in a bathtub in Chicago a short time ago. Mr. Shannon will have his offices in the Waukegan post office building. He has already taken charge. With him will be associated Victor N. Trausch, who was also assistant to Mr. Horan.

Mr. Shannon formerly had charge of the motor boat tax in this section and has been stationed at Fox Lake for the past few months.

Serious Auto Accident Sunday Afternoon

Miss Addie Schaffer is somewhat laid up this week on account of having been mixed up in an auto accident last Sunday afternoon.

For the past two weeks she has been visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Schroeder and her niece, Mrs. Simmons at Corlis, Wis., and as she had decided to return to her home here Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Simmons and daughter insisted upon bringing her home in their car and also insisted upon Mrs. Schroeder accompanying them.

The ride was a very pleasant one until just as they neared the Wertz place they saw an auto approaching at a lively rate and keeping decidedly to the middle of the road. To avoid a head on collision Miss Simmons who was driving crowded the side of the road as far as possible, when suddenly some stones underneath the wheels gave way and the car turned turtle into the ditch. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons and daughter were uninjured, but Mrs. Schroeder who is seventy-four years of age was pinned beneath the car. Her shoulder was broken and she was otherwise injured as well as suffering greatly from the shock. Miss Schaffer was bruised and cut about the head and face one elbow was sprained and she was quite badly shaken up.

They were taken to the Wertz home and a doctor was summoned. Miss Schaffer was brought to her home and the rest of the party returned to Burlington the same evening.

Board of Review

After Back Taxes

Petitions have been filed before the Lake County Board of Review in the case of twelve decedent Lake County estates, charging that the county is entitled to back taxes on personal property aggregating $10,535,000. The petitions were filed with the Board of Review by Attorneys Eugene Runyard and Charles Jack on behalf of the County of Lake.

Legal representatives of the twelve estates were present and asked for a continuance. They were given one week to prepare their cases. They will be given an opportunity to prove why the estates should not be made to pay back taxes for the period of five years, the limit provided by law.

The size of the estates did not become apparent until the death of the millionaires. Then it was seen that the decedents had not been paying taxes on their personal property.

The estates against which the petitions have been filed and the amount of omitted personal property in each case follows:

Robert Dady, Waukegan.....	$ 100,000
Mrs. Rose Chatfield-Trylor Lake Forest.....	800,000

Mr. Woodbury was at the back farm threshing when a neighbor drove into the yard and notified Mrs. Woodbury that he had noticed a cow dead along the pasture fence. Investigation proved that there were dead and that the whole herd was very much affected by the heat.

"I AM A PRISONER HERE."

Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, a wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile by a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern Barnes finds a stranded troupe of "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the leading lady. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night Andrew Roon and his servant, guests at the tavern, are shot near Green Fancy. Barnes comes under suspicion and stays to help clear up the double murder. He gets into the Green Fancy grounds; meets the mysterious girl, who gives him the cut direct, and is politely ejected by O'Dowd, an interesting adventurer. Enter at the tavern another man of mystery, Sprouse, "book agent." Barnes visits Green Fancy with the sheriff and stays to dinner. Enter still another mysterious personage, "Loeb," secretary to Curtis, owner of Green Fancy, who does not appear because of illness. Barnes again meets "Miss Cameron," the mysterious girl, who is a ravishing beauty in evening dress.

CHAPTER X.

The Prisoner of Green Fancy, and the Lament of Peter the Chauffeur.

He envied Mr. Rushcroft. The barn-stormer would have risen to the occasion without so much as the blinking of an eye. He did his best, however, and, despite his eagerness, managed to come off fairly well. Anyone out of earshot would have thought that he was uttering some trifling innuendo instead of these words:

"You may trust me. I have suspected that something was wrong here."

"It is impossible to explain now," she said. "These people are not my friends. I have no one to turn to in my predicament."

"Yes, you have," he broke in, and laughed rather hysterically for him. He felt that they were being watched in turn by every person in the room.

"Tonight—not an hour ago—I began to feel that I could call upon you for help. I began to relax. Something whispered to me that I was no longer utterly alone. Oh, you will never know what it is to have your heart lighten as mine—but I must control myself. We are not to waste words."

"You have only to command me, Miss Cameron. No more than a dozen words are necessary. Tell me how I can be of service to you."

"I shall try to communicate with you in some way—tomorrow. I beg of you, I implore you, do not desert me. If I can only be sure that you will—"

"You may depend on me, no matter what happens," said he, and, looking into her eyes, was bound forever.

"I have been thinking," she said. "Yesterday I made the discovery that I—that I am actually a prisoner here, Mr. Barnes, I—Smile! Say something silly!"

Together they laughed over the meaningless remark he made in response to her command.

"I am constantly watched. If I venture outside the house I am almost immediately joined by one of these men. You saw what happened yesterday. I am distracted."

"I will ask the authorities to step in and—"

"No! You are to do nothing of the kind. The authorities would never find me if they came here to search." (It was hard for him to smile at that.) "It must be some other way. If I could steal out of the house—but that is impossible," she broke off with a catch in her voice.

"Suppose that I were to steal into the house," he said, a reckless light in his eyes.

"Oh, you could never succeed!" "Well, I could try, couldn't I?" There was nothing funny in the remark, but they both leaned back and laughed heartily. "Leave it to me. Tell me where—"

"The place is guarded day and night. The stealthiest burglar in the world could not come within a stone's throw of the house."

"If it's as bad as all that, we cannot afford to make any slips. You think you are in no immediate peril?"

"I am in no peril at all unless I bring it upon myself," she said significantly.

"Then a delay of a day or so will not matter," he said, frowning. "Leave it to me. I will find a way."

"Be careful!" De Soto came lounging up behind them.

"Forgive me for interrupting, but I am under command from royal headquarters. Peter, the king of chauffeurs, sends in word that the car is in an amiable mood and champing to be off. So seldom is it in good humor that he—"

"I'll be off at once," exclaimed Barnes, arising. "By Jove, it is half-past ten. I had no idea—good night, Miss Cameron."

He pressed her hand reassuringly and left her.

She had arisen and was standing, straight and slim by the corner of the fireplace, a confident smile on her lips.

"If you are to be long in the neighborhood, Mr. Barnes," said his hostess, "you must let us have you again."

"My stay is short, I fear. You have only to reveal the faintest sign that I may come, however, and I'll hop into my seven-league boots before you can utter Jack Robinson's Christian name."

Good night, Mrs. Van Dyke. I have you all to thank for a most delightful evening."

The car was waiting at the back of the house. O'Dowd walked out with Barnes, their arms linked—as on a former occasion, Barnes recalled.

"I'll ride out to the gate with you," said the Irishman. "It's a winding, devious route the road takes through the trees."

They came in time, after many "hair pins" and right angles, to the gate opening upon the highway. Peter got down from the seat to release the padlocked chain and throw open the gate.

O'Dowd leaned closer to Barnes and lowered his voice.

"See here, Barnes, I'm no fool, and for that reason I've got sense enough to know that you're not either. I don't know what's in your mind, nor what you're trying to get into it if it isn't already there. But I'll say this to you, man to man: Don't let your imagination get the better of your common sense. That's all. Take the tip from me."

"I am not imagining anything," O'Dowd said Barnes quietly. "What do you mean?"

"I mean just what I say. I'm giving you the tip for selfish reasons. If you make a bully fool of yourself, I'll have to see you through the worst of it—and it's a job I don't relish. Ponder that, will ye, on the way home?"

Barnes did ponder it on the way home. There was but one construction to put upon the remark: It was O'Dowd's way of letting him know that he could be depended upon for support if the worst came to pass.

O'Dowd evidently had not been deceived by the acting that masked the conversation on the couch. He knew that Miss Cameron had appealed to Barnes, and that the latter had promised to do everything in his power to help her.

Suspecting that this was the situation, and doubtless sacrificing his own private interests, he had uttered the vague but timely warning to Barnes.

The significance of this warning grew under reflection. Barnes was not slow to appreciate the position in which O'Dowd voluntarily placed himself. A word or a sign from him would be sufficient to bring disaster upon the Irishman who had risked his own safety in a few irretrievable words. The more he thought of it, the more fully convinced was he that there was nothing to fear from O'Dowd.

Peter drove slowly, carefully over the road down the mountain. Responding to a sudden impulse, Barnes lowered one of the side seats in the tonneau and moved closer to the driver.

"How long have you been driving for Mr. Curtis?"

"Ever since he came up here, more'n two years ago. Guess I'm going to get the G. B. 'fore long, though. Seems that he's gettin' a new car an' wants an expert machinist to take hold of it from the start. I was good enough to fiddle around with this second-hand pile o' junk an' the one he had last year, but I ain't qualified to handle this here machine he's expectin' to say. I guess they've been some influence used against me, if the truth was known. This new secretary he's got ain't stummick me."

"Why don't you see Mr. Curtis and demand—"

"See him?" snorted Peter. "Might as well try to see Napoleon Bonaparte. Didn't you know he was a sick man?"

"Certainly. But he isn't so ill that he can't attend to business, is he?"

"He sure is. Paralyzed, they say."

"What has Mr. Loeb against you, if I may ask?"

"Well, it's like this. I ain't in the habit o' bein' ordered aroun' as if I was just nobody at all, so when he starts in to cuss me about somethin' a week or so ago, I ups and tells him I'll smash his head if he don't take it back. He takes it back all right, but the first thing I know I get a call-down from Mrs. Collier. Course I couldn't tell her what I told the sheeny, seein' as she's a female, so I took it like a lamb. Then they gits a feller up here to wash the car. My gosh, mister, the durned ole rattle-trap ain't with a bucket o' water all told. So I sends word in to Mr. Curtis that if she has to be washed, I'll wash her. Then's when I hears about the new car. Next day Mrs. Collier sends for me an' I go in. She says she guesses she'll try the new washer on the new machine when it comes, an' if I keer to stay on as washer in his place she'll be glad to have me. I says I'd like to have a word with Mr. Curtis, if she don't mind, an' she says Mr. Curtis ain't able to see no one. So I guess I'm goin' to be let out."

An idea was taking root in Barnes' brain, but it was too soon to consider it fixed.

"You say Mr. Loeb is new at his job?"

"Well, he's new up here. Mr. Curtis was down to New York all last winter bein' treated, you see. He didn't come up here till about five weeks ago. Loeb was workin' for him most of the winter, gittin' up a book or somethin', I hear. Mr. Curtis' mind is all right, I guess, even if his body ain't."

"I see. Mr. Loeb came up with him from New York."

"Kereet. Him and Mr. O'Dowd and Mr. De Soto brought him up 'bout the last o' March. They was up here visitin' last spring an' the fall before. Mr. Curtis is very fond of both o' em."

"It seems to me that I have heard that his son married O'Dowd's sister."

"That's right. She's a widder now. Her husband was killed in the war between Turkey an' them other countries four or five years ago."

"Really?"

"Yep. Him and Mr. O'Dowd—his own brother-in-law, y' know—was fightin' on the side of the Boogarians and young Ashley Curtis was killed."

"Was this son Mr. Curtis' only child?"

"So far as I know. He left three little kids. They was all here with their mother jest after the house was finished."

"They will probably come into this property when Mr. Curtis dies," said

"She's a Widder Now. Her Husband Was Killed in the War."

Barnes, keeping the excitement out of his voice.

"More'n likely."

"Was he very feeble when you saw him last?"

"I ain't seen him in more'n six months. He was fallin' then. That's why he went to the city."

"Oh, I see. You did not see him when he arrived the last of March?"

"I was visitin' my sister up in Hornville when he come back unexpected-like. This feller Loeb says he wrote me to meet 'em at Spanish Falls but I never got the letter. Like as not the durn fool got the address wrong. I didn't know Mr. Curtis was home till I come back from my sister's three days later. I wouldn't 'a' had it happen for fifty dollars." Peter's tone was convincingly doleful.

"And he has been confined to his room ever since? Poor old fellow! It's hard, isn't it?"

"It sure is. Seems like he'll never be able to walk ag'in. I was talkin' to his nurse only the other day. He says it's a hopeless case."

"Fortunately his sister can be here with him."

"By gosh, she ain't nothin' like him," confided Peter. "She's all fuss an' feathers an' he's jest as simple as you or me. Nothin' fluffy about him. I can tell ye." He sighed deeply. "I'm jest as well pleased to go as not, 't I went on. 'Mrs. Collier's got a lot o' money of her own, an' she's got highfalutin' New York ideas that don't seem to jibe with mine."

Long before they came to the turnpike, Barnes had reduced his hundred and one suppositions to the following concrete conclusion: Green Fancy was no longer in the hands of its original owner for the good and sufficient reason that Mr. Curtis was dead. The real master of the house was the man known as Loeb. Through O'Dowd he had leased the property from the widowed daughter-in-law, and had established himself there, surrounded by trustworthy henchmen, for the purpose of carrying out some dark and sinister project.

"I suppose Mrs. Collier has spent a great deal of time up here with her brother."

"First time she was ever here, so far as I know," said Peter, and Barnes promptly took up his weaving once more.

With one exception, he decided, the entire company at Green Fancy was involved in the conspiracy. The exception was Miss Cameron. It was quite clear to him that she had been misled or betrayed into her present position; that a trap had been set for her and she had walked into it blindly, trustingly. This would seem to establish, beyond question, that her capture and detention was vital to the interests of the plotters; otherwise she would not have been lured to Green Fancy under the impression that she was to find herself among friends and supporters. Supporters! That word started a new train of thought. He could hardly wait for the story that was to fall from her lips.

"By the way, Peter, it has just occurred to me that I may be able to give you a job in case you are let out by Mr. Curtis. I can't say definitely until I have communicated with my sister, who has a summer home in the Berkshires."

"I'll be much obliged, sir. Course I won't say a word. Will I find you at the tavern if I get my walkin' papers soon?"

"Yes. Stop in to see me tomorrow if you happen to be passing."

Barnes said good night to the man and entered the tavern a few minutes later. Putnam Jones was behind the desk and facing him was the little book agent.

"Hello, stranger," greeted the landlord. "Been sashaying in society, hey? Meet my friend Mr. Sprouse. Mr. Barnes. Sit 'em, Sprouse! Give him the Dickens!" Mr. Jones laughed loudly at his own jest.

Sprouse shook hands with his victim.

"I was just saying to our friend Jones here, Mr. Barnes, that you look like a more than ordinarily intelligent man and that if I had a chance to buzz with you for a quarter of an hour I could present a proposition."

"Sorry, Mr. Sprouse, but it is half-past eleven o'clock, and I am dog-tired. You will have to excuse me."

"Tomorrow morning will suit me," said Sprouse cheerfully. "If it suits you."

CHAPTER XI.

Mr. Sprouse Abandons Literature at an Early Hour in the Morning.

After thrashing about in his bed for seven sleepless hours, Barnes arose and gloomily breakfasted alone. He was not discouraged over his failure to arrive at anything tangible in the shape of a plan of action. It was inconceivable that he should not be able in very short order to bring about the release of the fair guest of Green Fancy. There was not the slightest doubt in his mind that international affairs of considerable importance were involved and that the agents operating at Green Fancy were under definite orders.

Mr. Sprouse came into the dining room as he was taking his last swallow of coffee.

"Ah, good morning," was the bland little man's greeting. "Up with the lark, I see. Mind if I sit down here and have my eggs?" He pulled out a chair opposite Barnes and coolly sat down at the table.

"You can't tell me a set of Dickens at this hour of the day," said Barnes sourly. "Besides, I've finished my breakfast. Keep your seat." He started to rise.

"Sit down," said Sprouse quietly. "Something in the man's voice and manner struck Barnes as oddly compelling. He hesitated a second and then resumed his seat. 'I've been investigating you, Mr. Barnes,' said the little man, unsmilingly. 'Don't get sore. There are a lot of things that you don't know, and one of them is that I don't sell books for a living. It's something of a side line with me.' He leaned forward. 'I shall be quite frank with you, sir. I am a secret service man. Yesterday I went through your effects upstairs, and last night I took the liberty of spying upon you, so to speak, while you were a guest at Green Fancy.'

"Sprouse plans things quite different from selling books, and takes Barnes into his confidence."

Answer Letters Promptly.

Punctuality is as important in social and business correspondence as it is in personal conduct. Men and women in business learn the importance of replying to letters as soon as received. Formal social notes such as invitations, wedding announcements or death notices should be acknowledged as soon as received and even friendly letters demand a reply within a week after their receipt, if true courtesy is observed.—Biddy Bye.

Mexican Sacrificial Stone.

The sacrificial stone was the stone on which human victims were sacrificed before the war god Huizilopochtli, in the principal Aztec temple in Mexico. It was dug up near the site of the temple in 1701, and is now in the Mexican national museum. The stone is diamond-shaped, 8.5 feet in diameter and 2½ feet thick. The sides are covered with elaborate sculptures.

A SUMMER COLD

A cold in the summer time, as everybody knows, is the hardest kind of a cold to get rid of.

The best and quickest way is to go to bed and stay there if you can, with a bottle of "Boschee's Syrup" handy to insure a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning.

But if you can't stay in bed you must keep out of draughts, avoid sudden changes, eat sparingly of simple food and take occasional doses of Boschee's Syrup, which you can buy at any store where medicine is sold, a safe and efficient remedy, made in America for more than fifty years. Keep it handy.—Adv.

Measures Human Vibrations.

Utilizing a galvanometer, a French scientist has invented apparatus for measuring vibrations of human bones and tissues, with which, among other things, he reads a person's pulse more accurately than by hand.

"I was in dreadful shape," says Mrs. W. B. Hoffman, 689 Oakley Ave., Hammond, Ill. 200,000 ACRE WHEAT FARM WITHOUT A HORSE

By Robert H. Moulton

FLOWING WITH TRACTORS

THOMAS D. CAMPBELL

BREAKING SOIL ON THE 200,000 ACRE FARM

FARMING 200,000 acres is certainly a man's-size job. But doing it without the use of a single horse is something else again. Yet, preposterous as it may sound, this feat is actually being performed by a Montana man, Thomas D. Campbell.

This huge farm, probably the largest in the world, is a direct result of the government's efforts to stimulate the growing of wheat during the last two years. The farm is devoted entirely to wheat, and it produces somewhere around the country's average of 28 bushels per acre, which is practically certain, it will add approximately 5,600,000 bushels to the 1919 wheat crop. At the government's guaranteed price of $2.25 cents a bushel, this represents the tidy sum of $12,500,000. Of course all this will not be net profit. But there should be enough left, after all expenses are paid, to make the venture worth while.

Thomas D. Campbell is the man who conceived the idea of the world's largest wheat farm, or any other sort of farm, for that matter. Originally of Grand Forks, more recently of Los Angeles, Cal., and now a resident of the Crow Indian reservation in Montana, where he stands an excellent chance of being elected chief of the Crows, Mr. Campbell has astonished the wheat growers of the country, as well as a lot of other people, by the vastness of the enterprise under his management.

It was during the summer of 1917 that Campbell first thought of raising wheat on a large scale on unused Indian lands, and wrote to the Indian bureau at Washington, outlining his plans and asking how to proceed to lease some of the tracts. He was courteously informed by sundry obscure clerks in the department that it couldn't be done. They cited certain rules and regulations and laws to prove their assertions.

This had the same effect on Mr. Campbell that a red rag does on a bull. The word "impossible" only makes him the more determined to do what he sets out to do. So he decided to try the men higher up and the result was a long telegram to President Wilson. Almost immediately came back a reply saying that the president was much interested in the project and had referred it to Secretary Lane of the Interior department, who would give the matter his personal attention.

The upshot of the matter was that a week or two later Mr. Campbell was in the presence of the secretary of the Interior. The first thing the secretary asked him was what kind of a contract he wanted.

"Any kind," was the reply, "just so I get a chance to raise a lot of wheat."

"What do you want for yourself?" asked the secretary.

"Nothing," Campbell replied. "I am willing to enroll with the dollar-a-year men if the government finances the project, and if I finance it myself all I want is a chance to break even."

That certainly made a hit with the secretary. He saw that he was dealing with a real man, so he asked him why he didn't make it 200,000 acres instead of the 20,000 he had asked for and added:

"Could you handle that many acres?"

"Certainly," replied Mr. Campbell, "only it will require more capital than I had figured on."

Secretary Lane said he thought that could be arranged and told Mr. Campbell to go ahead and draw a contract. The contract was drawn and in due time bore the signature of Secretary Lane, all the bureau chiefs and Mr. Campbell. The Indians, of course, were well taken care of under the terms of the contract. They will receive one-tenth of the crop during the first five years and one-fifth of the crop during the second five-year period at the end of which time the lease expires.

The next step was to finance the project, so Mr. Campbell hurried to New York, presented himself at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. and sent in word that Secretary Lane had asked him to call on a matter of business. Whether Mr. Morgan had received advance information of Mr. Campbell's coming or not is unimportant. The fact remains that he was immediately invited in.

Mr. Morgan listened while Mr. Campbell told his story. At the end of the story Mr. Morgan asked how much money would be required.

"Five million dollars," replied Mr. Campbell without batting an eye.

"Very well," said Mr. Morgan, "you may have it. And if that isn't enough, as much more will be available."

And so the 200,000-acre wheat farm came into existence, with Mr. Campbell as president of the Montana Wheat Farming corporation and general manager of the whole project.

But about the absence of horses from the farm.

All of the work is being done with tractors. Last fall, when the first ground was broken, there were fifty monster machines at work tearing up the prairie sod. This spring others were at work. They plowed on the average one acre a minute for the working time. A record was made on one day of 1,880 acres turned and broken. All the seeding, harvesting, etc., was also done by tractors, and then, of course, there are the thrashing machines. Hence the absolute uselessness of horses about this place.

One of the first problems Mr. Campbell had to solve was the number of various kinds of machines that would be required to do the work on the entire farm. He solved this by dividing the farm into units of 5,000 acres and then allowing a certain period for each operation—such as plowing, harrowing, seeding, cutting, thrashing—on each unit.

The 5,000-acre unit also has another use. Mr. Campbell, as active as he is, couldn't reasonably be expected to personally oversee work on 200,000 acres of land throughout the season. So each unit is put in charge of a competent farm manager, with a general foreman and a crew of men. Each unit also has its group of permanent and modern-equipped buildings. It is a gigantic proposition any way you take it.

WHY DESTROY YOUR FRIENDS?
Agriculturists Make Tremendous Mistake When They Wage War on Certain Types of Birds.

In the suburbs of one of our cities recently a man was arrested for shooting 83 robins and two cedar wax wings. When we consider that each year the people of the United States pay a toll of one billion dollars to insects, the reason for protecting our native birds is apparent.

Some birds feed almost entirely on the seeds of weeds, others on field mice and others on small rodents. Hawks and owls are considered outlaws, and the average citizen wants to shoot them if he can. It has been estimated that each hawk or owl kills on an average a thousand mice a year.

A recent examination of the stomach of a cedar wax wing (cherry bird) revealed 100 canker worms. In the stomach of a scarlet tanager were found 630 gypsy moth caterpillars. With the continued wanton destruction of native birds, successful agriculture would become impossible and the destruction of the greater part of food vegetation would follow.—Thrift Magazine.

Rubber-Seed Oil.

The report of the Federated Malay States agricultural department tells of the method of manufacture of rubber-seed oil, with a view to putting it on a commercial basis. It would seem from the report that this high-grade oil requires hardly any refining, is obtained from a waste product available in great quantity, easy to collect, transport and store and easy to crush. As far as can be foreseen, rubber-seed oil will soon occupy a place but little inferior to linseed oil.—Journal Ind. and Eng. Chem.

More Acres Tilled Last Year

When this country entered the war Uncle Sam called for an increased production of food, urging the farmers of the country to plant every available acre. The food producers of the nation responded by planting over 11,000,000 acres more than had been planted during the year previous. The acreage of all crops during 1918, according to figures just tabulated by the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture, was 367,738,000, as compared to 356,341,000 acres planted in 1917 and 344,793,000 acres planted in 1916. These figures are based on the acreages of corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, sweet potatoes, tobacco, flax, rice, hay, cotton, peanuts, kafir, beans, broom corn, hops and cranberries, which crops comprised 98.0 per cent of all crops in this country in 1909.

Knew Her Brother.
Maudie was evidently feeling embarrassed about something, and she blushed prettily as she told the sister of her fiancé that she would like to buy a birthday present for him.
"You know him better than I do," she said, "so I came to you to ask your advice."
"Yes?" said her future sister-in-law, inquiringly.
"What?" went on the blushing Maudie, "would you advise me to get?"
"Oh, I don't know," replied the other girl, carelessly. "I could only advise you in general terms. From what I know of him, I should say he would appreciate something that he could pawn easily!"

Grow Wheat in Western Canada

One Crop Often Pays for the Land

Western Canada offers the greatest advantages to home seekers. Large profits are assured. You can buy on easy payment terms. Fertile Land at $15 to $30 per Acre—land similar to that which through many years has averaged from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Hundreds of cases are on record where in Western Canada a single crop has paid the cost of land and production. The Government of the Dominion and Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta want the farmer to prosper, and extend every possible encouragement and help to Grain Growing and Stock Raising. Though Western Canada offers land at such low figures, the high prices of grain, cattle, sheep and hogs will remain. Loans for the purchase of stock may be had at low interest; there are good shipping facilities; best of markets; free schools; churches; splendid climate; low taxation (none on improvements). Outright Purchase of Valuable Oil Lands

In some of the richest territory in Wyoming is now being made by groups of BANKERS, FARMERS OF MEANS, and PROFESSIONAL MEN.

These tracts, selected by former Government Geologist, J. J. Fagan, are in close proximity to some of the largest and most productive wells in this famous oil country, and may be purchased at a lower price per acre than middle-west farm lands.

The deeds to these acres are delivered upon purchase, and owners are grouping their interests for the development of these valuable properties. Big producing wells are in and many others are in the various stages of drilling. Owning outright these scientifically selected oil lands offers greater money-making possibilities than investment in oil stocks.

BAZAARS of INDIA

The Bazaar of Lucknow.

THE day of the bazaar in India has long passed without hope for any return of its glory. Yet the visitor, in search of novelty, may still be fairly well satisfied with the results of the effort he must make to see what remains of the curious life in those places which are different from everything in this land; their nearest parallel being the French market in New Orleans, or a county fair, says the Christian Science Monitor.

The stranger to India should take the precaution to secure the services as a guide and physical protector of a thoroughly competent interpreter, one who is conversant with at least half a dozen of the numerous dialects spoken in India's commercial circles, and who—when it comes to buying or rejecting—knows at a glance "a hawk from a hornshaw" because, as a decidedly cynical Englishman said, "Nine-tenths of the stuff displayed in those Indian bazaars are spurious, and the remainder utterly worthless rubbish." An exaggeration, of course, yet it is a hard matter to find the few gems that may be there; and, at any rate, if the purchasable inanimate is lacking, the almost endless variety of the recumbent or animate human denizens is a rich reward for the fatiguing hours in a bazaar.

In Search of the Picturesque.

It is a great pity that civilization is so very inconsiderate toward the picturesque, the stranger, and the racially attractive (in spite of its dirt) which are so different from the life and the people we know and are so tired of, their inartistic dirt especially, that we often rush off to the antipodes to find something artistic and interesting. When we fall in our search, we are apt to abuse the writers who tell us—not what they really did see, but what they had predetermined they were to see.

It is not many years since that the bazaar at Delhi, to take at random one of the many, was truly a wonderful place. It occupied a large extent of ground, covered with all manner of ramshackle buildings, the ground floors of which were open stalls somewhat like those seen in the illustration accompanying this article. There were a few fairly broad thoroughfares which traversed the section from side to side in a serpentine course, but the really interesting and attractive shops were reached by many narrow, winding lanes, forming a veritable labyrinth, into which the unwary stranger who ventured alone was quickly lost; and when he was sure to be pounced upon by a flock of human vultures bent upon getting his last rupee in exchange for their wares, and heartless as to whether or not he got back to the meager civilization of Delhi's then wretched hotel.

In the main avenues there were—shall we say canals, or streams, or ditches? Well, there was something in whichever we call them that possessed the motion of liquid, and there was one, or perhaps two, rows of discouraged-looking trees. But in the narrow alleys there was no disguising the fact that those ditches were simply open drains, usually so torpid in their flow that the stench was almost overpowering, and the visitor from abroad wondered how any human being could breathe the fetid air all day and all night as complacently as did the bazaar denizens.

Occasional Bargains Found.

Nevertheless, those were the days when it was quite possible to pick up really rare and precious bargains for a song, plaques hammered out from brass or other metals, true gems of many kinds, jade ornaments daintily carved from jade in minute patterns, making them almost literally "worth their weight in gold," and many other treasures, such as nowadays never reach a bazaar stall, for they are snapped up by professional dealers the moment they leave the hands of their original owner, whom want compels to sacrifice, and the dealer knows exactly where lives the rich Indian who pays, without much haggling, the top-most price.

The glory of the bazaar, like that of practically all that was picturesque, of practically all that was vitally needed had given way to the vitally needed sanitary measures. But the bazaar still exists, although rather in what we would call open or general markets. Undoubtedly they continue to offer many temptations spread before the covetous eyes of the foreign visitor in such alluring ways that the end of purchasing is not reached even when the bottom of the purse is, because the dealers are only too glad to send their wares to the hotel to be paid for at master's or madam's convenience, and lots of other "rare bargains" which cannot be duplicated.

Most Fascinating of Streets.

Mr. Curtis' "Modern India" says of Delhi's Chandni Chauk, "Silver Street," that it is fairly called "the most picturesque and fascinating street in the world." Between the two rows of trees that grow along the center of its width of 75 feet there was formerly an aqueduct of clear, running water, that is now filled, and its banks are the great promenade for the city's gentry, both foreign residents and natives.

But the street is marvelous for the adeptness of the shopkeepers in "spotting" the stranger. Let a visitor from abroad appear, no matter how perfectly (he, at least, thinks) he has disguised himself in proper Indian garb, he is pounced upon by a swarm of shopkeepers, and besought to avail himself of the bargains that were never before offered, and never will again fall to his good fortune, until he either yields and secures, sometimes a true bargain, but often a lot of rubbish, or calls to his relief a friendly policeman, usually a swarthy Sikh. Sometimes it is most amusing when rival merchants grapple each other in their frantic efforts to secure the monopoly of a seemingly profitable customer, and the policeman's services are required to separate the belligerents.

Freak Fiddles.

The story of freak fiddles would fill a book. They have been made of tin, copper, iron, leather, glass and paper. They have assumed many wonderful shapes. Last year, in Los Angeles, a blind fiddler used to play on the corner with a fiddle that had no body. A tin horn did the work of the ordinary sound box of the violin. This was the invention of a local man. A certain corporation making phonograph records in the east uses an aluminum violin. This instrument is scientifically constructed and used by one of the greatest artists in making records of his solos for reproduction on talking machines. Even the highest priced old violins do not sound as one expects a violin to sound when it is reproduced on a record. This aluminum violin corrects that and the listeners sit entranced at the sweet tones of the record. The violin, itself, has a most disagreeable tone. —Los Angeles Times.

Steaming Paper.

Stripping wallpaper from the walls of a room is a tedious and unpleasant task. The following method has been found to do this work satisfactorily: Remove all furniture from the room and take up the floor covering; place in the middle of the room some kind of a portable stove with a big pan of water on top. Light the stove and close all the windows and doors; when the room becomes full of steam it will soften the paste which has been used for sticking the paper on the wall. After an hour or more of the steaming it will be easy to remove the paper.

As Far as It Goes.

Some people's idea of efficiency is to pin a notice on the front door that the bell is out of order, instead of having it fixed. —Ohio State Journal.

Sheriff for Best Man.

My father was at one time a sheriff in Colorado, writes a correspondent. He arrested a young man on a charge of assault with intent to kill, growing out of a quarrel over some water rights. The man had no one to go his bond and had to stay in jail.

He said he didn't mind the arrest so much because he was sure he would be cleared when his case was tried, but it was just three days before his wedding. The next day the prospective bride put in an appearance and pleaded with my father to let him off for the wedding, as everything had been arranged for it.

Father knew it would cause trouble with the other faction in the quarrel if he released the man. He agreed to let them go ahead if they would let him act as best man with the bridegroom handcuffed to him. This was agreed to. The wedding came off at the scheduled time. Father drove out from the jail with the bridegroom, stood up with him during the ceremony, and brought him back immediately afterwards. A month later the man was acquitted.

Strange Indian Names.

A recent issue of the Ogala Light, the monthly magazine of the Pine Ridge Indian reservation school near Rapid City, S. D., gives some peculiar names among those listed as students. Lizzie Shot to Pieces is at the end of the list. Other names include Victoria Holy Rock, Julia Aftal of Hawk, Mary Brown Ears, Julia Crazy Ghost, Mercy Yellow Shirt, Emma No Fat, Ella Red Eyes, Martin Chase Alone, Noah Horse, John Left Hand and Julia Stand Up. Out of 93 students attending the school only four have French names and seven names of English origin.

Cure for Ivy Poisoning.

A perfectly simple, harmless and efficacious remedy for ivy poisoning will be found in Epsom salts. The worst attack of poisoning can be quickly cured by bathing frequently in a strong solution of Epsom salts, and as there is no danger in using anything so harmless it is worth trying if you are inclined to be doubtful or incredulous.

How a Scarecrow Works.

"I see you have a scarecrow in your field," said the vacationist to the old farmer. "Do you find it effective?" "Suttlily!" replied the farmer. "So many blundering tramps cross over to see if the clothes on it are worth stealing it keeps the birds away." —Boston Transcript.

Overworked Word.

It has been estimated by a reliable statistician that if the printed letters forming the word "co-operation" were clipped from the magazines, all the times that they occur therein during any six months of the year, and placed end to end, they would reach three times the distance from the earth to the moon.

Colored Rains.

The rain can and does wash down anything that happens to be in the air at the time, including dust, pollen, small insects, but we have no record of tadpoles being washed down out of the air. The phenomena of colored rains, so-called rain of blood, etc., can be readily explained by the presence of dust in the atmosphere.

Gruesome Binding.
There is a copy of Milton's poems in the public library at Exeter (Eng.) bound in part of the skin of George Cudmore, who, with Sarah Dunn, was committed to the Devon county jail on October 30, 1820, for murdering his wife by poisoning her, was tried at the Lent assizes in the following year, and executed on March 25, 1830.

WIFE'S DETECTIVE IS GOOD SPENDER

But "Squealed at $6.50 Drink Bill," Husband Writes; Evidence Wins Decree.

Chicago.—Harold A. Waterbury may not be the truest husband in the world, but he is one of the most obliging. A few weeks ago, for instance, Charles E. Erbstein attorney for Mrs. Pauline Waterbury, 5353 Michigan avenue, sent a private detective to St. Louis to obtain evidence for a divorce.

Waterbury didn't keep the detective waiting long. After it was all over he wrote his wife a letter, which was offered by Attorney Erbstein before Superior Judge Hopkins yesterday. It read:

"Dear Pauline—Your detective 'came and saw and conquered.' He is now on his way rejoicing, though I had expected an offer from him for his silence."

"He was quite a joke, and at that did have me fooled for at least two hours."

"I do not know who paid for it, but he showed me a good time, though he squealed a little when one round of drinks set him back over $6.50."

"At first I thought I would work fast and let him get away Saturday, but reconsidered, and kept him waiting for the proper staging for the climax. He has all the 'evidence' now. Fortunately the police station is only a block from the hotel, so I was not put to much trouble and only detained a moment."

"If you had seen fit to consult me I could have saved you considerable expense. The lack of confidence is one of the fundamental principles which are responsible for our separation."

Mrs. Waterbury named an "Ethel Root." The wife was granted a divorce.

Death of Bear Is Birth of Romance

Prosser met his bride while on a hunting party in the northwest and stood beside her when she shot a black bear.

LEAVES "HUBBY" FOR CAGE

Six Months of Matrimony With Red-Haired Man Entirely Too Strenuous.

Philadelphia.—After six months of married life with a red-haired husband, Mrs. Olga Celeste Murphy is going to resume her comparatively restful occupation of training and exhibiting a troupe of leopards in their big cage.

Olga Celeste began with training horses, after running away as a little girl. Her parents found her several days later living in a barn with a manger for a bed and hay for food.

Subsequently she advanced to leopard training. But when she tried matrimony as the next step she went too far, she says, for a woman used to the companionship of nothing more vicious than leopards.

Hanging up the receiver prematurely means that your time and the time and work of the operator have been wasted. If the called party answers after you have abandoned the call, the operator must come on the line and explain, "A party called you but they have hung up. Excuse it, please."

WILSON SHOWS LEAGUE PLANS

Original American Proposal Contained Nothing About Monroe Doctrine.

REFUSES BLISS CHINA LETTER

Communication Was Strictly Confidential and Made References to Government Which the General Did Not Wish to Reveal.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The original American draft of the League of Nations covenant, sent to the foreign relations committee by President Wilson, contains several provisions widely differing from the league covenant as adopted at Paris.

The much debated provisions of article X of the present covenant for guaranteeing the territorial integrity of league members is almost identical with a clause in the American draft. The latter was as follows:

"The contracting powers undertake to respect and to protect as against external aggression the political independence and territorial integrity of all states members of the league."

The American plan contained no provision for withdrawal from membership and made no reference to the Monroe doctrine. It also contained a provision not finally accepted under which the league would "inquire into the feasibility of abolishing compulsory military service."

There also was a provision in the American plan, omitted from the final draft, which declared it a "fundamental covenant" that no power should overstep international agreements for rights on the high seas.

Many of the arbitration provisions are virtually the same in the two drafts. The American draft also contained the plan finally adopted for a council and a larger assembly and embodied a disarmament program similar to that in the final covenant. It also provided for an economic boycott of covenant-breakers.

In transmitting the American plan, the president said no stenographic reports were taken on the debates in the League of Nations commission and that such memoranda as were taken in it were agreed should be confidential.

President Wilson refused to send the senate a copy of General Bliss' statement concerning the Shantung settlement, on the ground that it contained confidential reference to other governments.

"In reply to the request," the president wrote, "let me say that General Bliss did write me a letter in which he took very strong ground against the proposed Shantung settlement, and that his objections were concurred in by the secretary of state and Henry White."

"But the letter cannot properly be described as a protest against the final Shantung decision, because it was written before that decision had been arrived at."

"I would have no hesitation in sending the senate a copy of General Bliss' letter were it not for the fact that it contains references to other governments, which it was perfectly proper for General Bliss to make in a confidential communication to me, but which I am sure General Bliss would not wish to have repeated outside our personal and intimate exchange of views."

"I have received no written protests from any officials connected with or attached to the American peace commission with regard to this matter."

Replying to a senate resolution asking for information regarding any treaty purporting to have been made by Japan and Germany during the progress of the great war, the president said he knew of no such negotiations, though he had heard rumors concerning them.

President Wilson also informed the senate in response to another resolution that he was "happy to say" that he had no memorandum or information with reference to any attempt of the Japanese delegates at Paris to intimidate the Chinese peace delegates. The president's letter follows:

"I have received the resolutions of the senate, dated July 15 and July 17, asking:

"First, for a copy of any treaty purporting to have been projected between Germany and Japan, such as was referred to in the press dispatch inclosed, together with any information in regard to it which may be in possession of the state department, or any information concerning any negotiations between Japan and Germany during the progress of the war."

"In reply to that resolution, I have the honor to report that I know of no such negotiations."

"PAT" McLANE

"Pat" McLane of Pennsylvania is a railroad engineer by profession, and the fact that he is a member of the Sixty-sixth congress is explained by reason of a leave of absence from his regular job. The Scranton Democrats sought to induct Representative Farr; the locomotive engineer objected and won a victory by 201 votes. He likes a seat in the house of representatives as a diversion, but prefers a cab seat in a railway engine as a permanent vocation.

PACKERS UNDER FIRE

"BIG FIVE" TARGET OF U. S. ATTORNEY GENERAL PALMER.

Charges Clear Violations of Antitrust Law—Hoarding Defined as Crime—Goods Will Be Confiscated

Washington, Aug. 8.—Developments in the government's drive on the high cost of living popped out so fast that they tumbled over one another.

Attorney General Palmer announced the bringing of antitrust suits against the five great packing concerns—Armour, Swift, Wilson, Morris and Cudahy.

At the same time the attorney general ordered all agents of the department of justice to arrest profiteers, hoarders and other contributors to soaring food costs. The first arrests came in Pittsburgh where a concern was wholesaling sugar at 14 cents a pound.

Food hoards may be confiscated by the government.

Intermingled with the cost of living situation was the decision of the senate interstate commerce committee to notify the president that it disagrees with his suggestion for a special wage board to deal with railway employees' demands. The committee holds the president has sufficient authority already to deal with the situation.

Antitrust suits against the five big meat packers will be instituted immediately by the department of justice.

Attorney General Palmer announced that the evidence before the federal trade commission and committees of congress indicated "a clear violation of the antitrust laws," and that he had ordered "prompt action accordingly."

Isidor J. Kresel of the New York law firm of Jerome, Rand & Kresel will have charge of the case.

CARNEGIE DIES AT LENOX, MASS.

Steel Leader Succumbs From Pneumonia at Summer Home, "Shadow Brook."

HAD BEEN ILL MANY MONTHS

Introduced Bessemer Process of Making Steel and Revolutionized the Industry—Last Ambition Was to Die Poor.

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 11.—Andrew Carnegie died at his summer home, "Shadow Brook," here at 7 o'clock this morning. The cause of death was bronchial pneumonia.

Mr. Carnegie, who was 84 years old, had been under the constant care of physicians and nurses for several months.

Mr. Carnegie was one of the world's richest men. His last ambition was to die "poor." He gave millions to Carnegie libraries and various charitable funds.

Andrew Carnegie was born Nov. 25, 1835, at Dunfermline, Fifeshire, Scotland. In 1848 he was brought to America by his parents, who settled in Pittsburgh, Pa.

His first work was as a weaver's assistant in a cotton factory in Allegheny, Pa. In 1851 he took a more responsible position as a messenger boy for the Ohio Telegraph company in Pittsburgh.

During this time he learned telegraphy. Later he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania railroad and became an operator. Here he advanced rapidly and soon was superintendent of the Pittsburgh division of the road.

He joined Mr. Woodruff, inventor of the sleeping car, in organizing the Woodruff Sleeping Car company. Here he gained the nucleus for his fortune.

He began careful investments in oil lands and increased his means.

Then the civil war came. Mr. Carnegie offered his services and was made superintendent of military railways, and government telegraph lines in the east.

After the war he developed iron works of various kinds and established at Pittsburgh the Keystone Bridge works and the Union Iron works. It was then that he introduced into this country the famous Bessemer process for making steel. This was in 1858.

The Bessemer process revolutionized the steel industry and made him the steel king of his huge fortune.

A few years later he was the principal owner of the Homestead and Edgar Thompson Steel works and other large plants. He was head of Carnegie, Phillips & Co. and Carnegie Bros. & Co. These interests were consolidated in 1899 in the Carnegie Steel company.

The letter stated: "General Mackensen has just returned from China, where he went early in the spring, at the invitation of the Chinese government, with 8,000 German officers to organize and drill an army of 5,000,000 men."

The letter said that the field marshal's object in returning to Germany at this time was to obtain additional officers for the work in China.

CHICAGO STRIKE ENDS

STOCK YARDS QUIET WHEN SOLDIERS ARE WITHDRAWN.

Leaders of the Unions Satisfied and Men Return to Work—Race Riots Over.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Conditions in the stockyards district appeared to be again on a normal basis following the withdrawal of the police and deputy sheriffs from guard duty in the district. Numbers of Sunday shift workers, who previously walked out, returned to work. No trouble of any kind was experienced.

Lieut. Ben Knight of the Stock Yards station, in charge of the detail surrounding the yards, said the only policemen near the stock yards were those outside the packing district, and that they were the patrolmen who have been regularly assigned for years. The only policemen inside the yards were the special guards hired by the packers.

"The men will all report for work," J. W. Johnstone, secretary of the Stock Yards Labor council, said. "We have gained the concession to obtain which the men walked out and there will be no more trouble, we hope. There is no race feeling whatever among the workers, so far as I know, and there will be no racial outbreak of any nature in the yards if we can prevent it."

The Stock Yards, New City and Deering stations all reported "no trouble" in their districts.

Union headquarters at Forty-eighth and Paulina streets was virtually deserted during the day.

Many Are Beaten in the Streets—Country Swept Bare of Food by Roumanians.

Budapest, Aug. 11.—The Roumanians have swept the country bare of provisions for miles around Budapest. The American food mission at Vienna, in response to urgent appeals, has undertaken to feed the school children of Budapest.

TELLS HINES TO END RAIL STRIKE

President Instructs Director General to Fix Wage of the Workers.

DECIDE DEMANDS ON MERITS

Wilson Insists, However, Men Must Return to Work First—Action Taken After Committee Decides Legislation Unnecessary.

Washington, Aug. 9.—President Wilson took the railroad wage crisis into his own hands and told the striking railroad shop employees to go back to work if they wanted their demands for increases considered.

His request for legislation having been regarded as unnecessary by the senate committee on interstate commerce, the president said a duty had been imposed upon him to act and he did so in no uncertain way in a letter to Director General Hines, which, in effect, orders railroad strikers back to work and to obey the authority of their national organizations.

The president notified the director general to inform the railroad shopmen that their demand for increases would be considered on its merits, but that:

"Until the employees return to work and again recognize the authority of their own organization the whole matter must be at a standstill."

The president also said, referring to the "careful consideration" which the administration is giving to the high cost of living, that this was a time when every employee of the railways "should help to make the processes of transportation more easy and economical rather than less, and employees who are on strike are deliberately delaying a settlement of their wage problem and of their standard of living."

"They should promptly return to work," the president's letter to Director Hines said, "and I hope that you will urge upon their representatives the immediate necessity for their doing so."

"I hope that you will make it clear to the men concerned that the railroad administration cannot deal with problems of this sort, or with any problems affecting the men, except through the duly chosen international officers of their authorized committee."

"When federal control of the railroads began the existing agreements between the shopmen's organizations and the several railroad companies and by agreement machinery was created for handling the grievances of the shopmen's organization of all the railways, whether they therefore had had the benefit of definite agreements or not."

"There can be no question, therefore, of the readiness of the government to deal in a spirit of fairness and by regular methods with any matters the men may bring to their attention."

"Concerted and very careful consideration is being given by the entire government to the question of reducing the high cost of living. I need hardly point out how intimately and directly this matter affects every individual in the nation, and if transportation is interrupted, it will be impossible to solve it."

Immediately upon receipt of the president's letter Director Hines urged the strikers to return to work in the following letter:

"Washington, D. C., Aug. 9.—Executive Council, Railway Employees Department, American Federation of Labor, B. M. Jewell, Acting President—Dear Sir: I inclose a letter I have just received from the president relative to the wage matter. It is obvious that it is of the highest importance, not only in the interest of the public but in the interest of the employees themselves, that they shall immediately return to work."

"The situation having been clarified by the definite indication that congress does not wish to take action in the premises, the railroad administration stands ready to take up the wage question on its merits with the duly accredited international officers and their authorized representatives as soon as the employees return to work."

Philosophy Loser.
He was a cheerful philosopher. He had just lost a close game of golf, and his friends were sympathizing with him.

"Don't sympathize with me," he said. "I've had great fun. It was a tough match and I should like to have won it, but don't overlook the fact that I've had the joy of a good game. Save your sympathy for the poor devil who can't get any pleasure out of a sport unless he wins."

If that isn't philosophy we don't know what is.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promise of the manufacturer. This applies particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills all most every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

UNKNOWN PANAMA

Nut Palm Beside the Jungle Trail.

I BELIEVE it will surprise most Americans, and perhaps a few of our field naturalists, to learn that right at the back door of the Panama canal lies an almost unknown jungle wilderness, unmapped and practically uninhabited in the interior except for a few very primitive Indians. Virtually the entire eastern portion of the republic of Panama lying between the canal and Colombia, roughly 300 miles long by from 50 to 100 miles wide, is unknown, and the published maps of this country, except for the seacoast and the location of half a dozen small towns, are all faked, writes Lieut. Col. Townsend Whelen in Natural History.

It was my good fortune to spend the entire dry seasons (December to June) of 1918 and 1917 exploring a part of this country. We found it necessary to know something of that portion of it nearest the canal, and it fell to my lot, assisted by Companies E and H. Twenty-ninth United States Infantry, to make a preliminary exploration with a view to planning and expediting its accurate mapping by the engineer corps.

It is because this little piece of jungle probably will remain virgin and unspoiled for many years that I think it ought to be brought to the attention of our field naturalists. It is so easily accessible, and yet only the borders of it have been scratched by the scientist. No one yet knows what is in the interior, what secrets it contains, what new fauna and flora its exploration will reveal.

In the Real Jungle.

In the Canal zone, which extends five miles to either side of the canal, practically all of the jungle forest has long since been cut off, and in its place has grown up a dense, impenetrable second growth of small trees, palms, creepers, thorns, and coarse grass. But if one cuts his way through this tangled growth for about five miles in from the canal he comes to the real jungle, standing up like a gigantic wall of green verdure. Once in it all is different, even the very climate itself. Here one can wander at will, unimpeded by thorns and creepers. It is even easier traveling here than in the woods of our own Northeast, because as a rule there is much less "down" timber. It is like a new world, a world that one has not even read about.

From the blazing sun and sweltering heat of the second growth one enters what is almost an underground world, cool and balmy. Everywhere the giant trees go up limbless for from 100 to 200 feet, and then spread out their verdure, literally hiding the sky. Beautiful slender palms grow in great profusion in the semidarkness forming the lower growth, impeding one's view but not one's progress. Scarcely ever can one see more than 50 yards, and never does the explorer get an extended view, even from the tops of the highest mountains. When I first entered the jungle it was with an indescribable feeling of awe and wonder, and this feeling has never left me; nay, it persists, drawing me, calling me to come back, more insistent even than the "Call of the North."

Unexplored Mountain Ranges.

That part of the jungle in which my most intensive exploration was conducted lies to the east of the city of Colon, between there and the town of Nombre de Dios, and extending from the Caribbean coast inland to the headwaters of the Chagres river system. Between the Chagres basin and the Caribbean coast rises the cordillera of Cerro Bruja, a mountain range that starts about ten miles east of Colon, and rises steadily, culminating in the peak of Cerro Bruja (8,200 feet) about 15 miles south of the town of Porto Bello. East of Cerro Bruja peak the Rio Piedras rises almost in the basin of the Chagres, flows north around the base of Cerro Bruja, then west, and empties into the sea half way between Colon and Porto Bello. The Piedras is one of the largest rivers of Panama, but you will not find it on any map, even its mouth having been mistaken for a lagoon of the sea when the coast line was charted.

The Rio Grande, figuring largely on existing maps, is an insignificant little stream, several miles long, really unworthy of a name. Beyond the valley of the upper Piedras rises a really imposing range of mountains called Cerro Saximo, culminating in a peak some where south of Nombre de Dios, which must attain an altitude of from 6,000 to 8,000 feet. I think I am the only one who has ever visited this range, as it seems to be invisible from any place where there is any trace of human beings, and its presence is barely noted on only one old map, with no indication as to its altitude.

Beyond Saximo neither I nor anyone else know what. There are rumors that the interior beyond is inhabited by Indians of the San Blas (Cuna-Cuna) tribe, and that they are very hostile to invasion of their country by whites.

Plant and Animal Life.

I must confess to absolute incompetency when it comes to a description of the flora of the jungle, incompetency both scientific and linguistic. I doubt if the jungle as a whole can be described—it can only be marveled at. It is beautiful, appalling, terrifying. I never cease to wonder at the trees—giant morus, boricion, cavanillesia, celbas, rubber, and fig. The enormous trunks with great buttressed roots rise 100 feet without a limb, and then spread out literally to hide the sky. Limbs, so high that one can scarcely see them among the leaves, drop lianas to the ground—long tangled lines like the wrecked rigging of some masted ship. Then there is the secondary growth, a hundred varieties of tree ferns and palms, suited by nature to grow in semidarkness, robbed of the sunlight by their giant neighbors.

The bird life is no less wonderful than the vegetation. The Panama jungle is alive with birds. The variety and coloring are truly remarkable. On the ground I observed several varieties of quail, tinamous, and pheasants. In the low-bush area are wrens, humming birds, thrushes, ant birds, and a variety of other species either common to the United States or unknown to me. In the medium zone, half way to the leafy ceiling of the jungle, dwell doves, guans, owls, motmots, and trogons. High up in the roof are parrots, parakeets, macaws, toucans, and cotingas.

The mammal life of the jungle is also very abundant. The ordinary traveler, however, will see little of it owing to several conditions which only a man with extensive hunting or collecting experience will realize. Among the animals I observed were tapir, deer, peccary, agouti, paca, sloth, coati-mundi, kinkajou, anteaters, monkeys, otter, puma, jaguar (spotted and black), ocelot, squirrels, opossums of many varieties, and rabbits. Snakes were fairly numerous, the harlequin snake, boa constrictors, and a very long and thin bright green tree snake being the most numerous.

Dad's Position.

"Nope, you can't marry him." "But, papa, consider his wavy hair, his soulful eyes. He is my ideal." "Listen here, girl. If you could meet up with an ideal earning as much as $30 a week I wouldn't say a word."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
